Russia's Aeroflot Orders Further 100 Russia-Made Planes

By Reuters

Sept. 10, 2018

MOSCOW — Russia's Aeroflot has agreed to order a further 100 Sukhoi Superjet 100 (SSJ 100) planes, representing the biggest deal in the company's contemporary history, it said on Monday.

The deal could be worth more than $3 billion and falls under the Russian flagship carrier's new strategy to focus on regional routes, the Vedomosti business daily reported on Monday.

Aeroflot, which is controlled by the state, said last month it would focus its 2023 strategy on launching new regional bases and hubs, as well as on increasing the proportion of Russian aircraft in its fleet.

Currently, almost two-thirds of all domestic flights in Russia go via Moscow. In May, Russian President Vladimir Putin said the share of flights bypassing the capital should increase to 50 percent by 2024.
